Syrian / Arabic Hot Food Stall in Bury Market

Opening Saturday November 10th 2018

Free tasters all day

3 years ago the war in Syria forced Ghassan and Siham to leave everything and flee to Bury to start a new life.

Bury offered them a place of safety and hope. Somewhere they could raise their daughter Katrina in peace and give her a future.

They brought nothing but their Christian faith and a belief in a God of new beginnings.

They worked hard to learn English and integrate and grew to love Bury and its people. The bustling market in Bury reminded them of markets back home in Hama and slowly a dream began to form. A dream of starting their own business and becoming independent - of making their own way and giving back to the community that had welcomed them.
